U.S. Army Security Assistance Command

The U.S. Army Security Command (USASAC) is responsible for managing security assistance programs and Foreign Military Sales (FMS) for the Army. USASAC is known as the “Army’s Face to the World” because it serves as the primary entry point for U.S. Army materiel- and service-related FMS requirements.

The U.S. Army Materiel Command Security Assistance leads the Army Materiel Command’s (AMC’s) Security Assistance Enterprise and co-leads the Army Security Assistance Enterprise (ASEA). The command develops and manages security assistance programs and Foreign Military Sales (FMS) cases to build partner capacity, support geographic Combatant Command (COCOM) engagement strategies and strengthen U.S. global partnerships.

USASAC implements approved U.S. Army security assistance programs, including FMS of defense articles and services to eligible foreign governments. USASAC is responsible for life cycle management of FMS cases, from pre-Letter of Request (LOR), to development, execution, and closure.

In carrying out the Army security assistance mission, USASAC calls on all AMC Life Cycle Management Commands (LCMCs), as well as other DoD agencies and U.S. industry to support its processes. More than 40 organizations comprise the ASAE.
